Cross-Shattered Christ

by Rick Beerhorst

Rick created these images for a book titled “Cross-Shattered Christ: Meditations on the Seven Last Words” by Stanley Hauerwas. Rick reflects on the project: “Cross-Shattered Christ helped take me deeper into Jesus again. I don’t really like going to the cross - I usually feel like the man who was forced into carrying Jesus’s Cross with him. And yet I know I need to keep going to the cross because every time I do I get a little more free. So for the artist, a project like this becomes a kind of spiritual exercise. Searching for images and refining them actually carries me deeper into the presence of God.

These pictures were done in wood block printing process, beginning with pencil sketches, transferred to a block of birch plywood, carved, inked and printed. This process of making a printed image is very simple and unchanged for thousands of years.

“Father, forgive them; for they do not know what they are doing.”
